

1. Write down the qualification of the head of the state? (72-73 page)

Qualifications of the Head of an Islamic State

1. Muslim Male: The head must be a Muslim male, based on the Qur'anic verse commanding obedience to those in authority from among the believers (Qur'an 4:59). Leadership is also seen as a male responsibility, referencing the verse about men being protectors and maintainers of women.

2. Physically Fit and Trustworthy: The head must be strong and trustworthy, as exemplified in the Qur'an and the Prophet's saying that a strong believer is preferable to a weak one. The leader also serves as the Commander-in-Chief and chief Imam, making physical and mental fitness essential.

3. Unblemished Character: Moral integrity is crucial. The leader must emulate the high character of the Prophet Muhammad صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم. A leader with strong morals can guide the community as a role model.

4. Knowledge of Islamic Shariah: The head of state must have a sound understanding of the Qur'an and Sunnah, as per the Prophet's guidance (Hadith), to lead effectively in religious and legal matters.

5. Dedication to Islamic Principles: The leader should be a practicing Muslim, committed to implementing Islamic law. Knowledge without action makes a person ineffective.

6. Mature Age: The leader should be of sufficient maturity, preferably above 40, reflecting the Prophetic tradition where Prophets began their missions at this age. This maturity allows for better decision-making and emotional balance.

7. No Greed for Power: The head should not desire the position for personal gain, as shown in the hadith Prophet's refusal to appoint those who seek authority. Leadership is a heavy responsibility, and those who assume it without greed will receive Allah's assistance.

8. Most Allah-Fearing: The leader must be the most pious and Allah-fearing, ensuring that his decisions benefit the people in this world and the hereafter. This fear of Allah ensures just governance.

2. Write down the function of the Executive? (84-85 page)

Functions of the Executive

The functions of the Executive depend on the nature of the government. In an Islamic state, the functions of the Executive in brief are as follows:

1. To manage all sorts of activities for the attainment of the purposes of the state.
2. To protect the country from foreign aggression.
3. To maintain foreign relations.
4. To perform the financial functions.
5. To maintain law and order and run the administration.
6. To establish and maintain the publication and broadcasting departments and communicate the local and global news to the citizens fairly and impartially.
7. To appoint hisbah (ombudsman) for supervising the activities of all the branches of government.

So, the Executive of a state is responsible for all the affairs of the state and its citizens.
